The Mausoleum Carousel Zachary Taylor

In an age when the American Dream requires reckless Consumerism just to keep up with the Joneses, Zachary Taylor provides a glimpse into one family's struggle to realize that along with such modern frivolousness comes a moral and emotional debt that cannot be mortgaged for a second, third, or fourth time.

Taylor's collective protagonist is the Koolidge family--Kalvin Sr, Linda, John, and Calvin Jr--and one day, their life in the suburbs, their mausoleum carousel, begins to spin out of control. Calvin Sr is a failed aeronautics engineer working a manual labor job in which he is grossly overqualified. Linda is a pianist whose song was silenced by the demands of homemaking. John is a fortunate son whose high school career served as the catalyst for his teenage wrecking ball of a libido. And Calvin Jr is the sensitive photographer whose creativity has been stifled by his family's indifference to his art. These conflicts eventually give way to a heartbreaking conclusion that will force any reader to reconsider their role in 21st century America and ponder the question: is the American Dream worth it?
