This heart-grabbing collection of individually written stories penned by suicide loss survivors will invite you to understand the larger implications of how suicide affects others. This collection poses several questions.

What happens to the people left behind when a loved one takes their life?

How do the survivors navigate the grieving process?

Do suicide loss survivors ever recover from such a profound trauma?

Answers to these questions are explored through the submissions of the 26 contributors to this work.

Did you know someone takes their life in the United States every 16 minutes? Each year approximately 40,000 people take their lives, making suicide the tenth leading cause of death for Americans. The number of annual suicides in the United States is double that of the number of homicides.

For every completed suicide, there are approximately six survivors. This means roughly 240,00 suicide loss survivors were created in the United States just this year.
