Sherlock Holmes, smart and fascinated with thinking, lives not from from the spot of crime. He dreams for a better life. His highborn mother is the daughter of an aristocratic family, and his father a poor Jewish intellectual. Their marriage flouts tradition and makes them social pariahs in the London; and poverty is the price they pay for their marriage. A strange impulse compels Sherlock to return to the spot of the crime, where he comes across the accused Arab. The process of seeking justice is very dangerous.
